ATP

Association of Test Publishers

The intelligent voice for testing

Helping educational and governmental organizations and the general public understand the role played by tests, by testing professionals and by test publishers in improving educational practice and outcomes.

What is ATP?

Established in 1992, The Association of Test Publishers (“ATP”) is a non-profit organization representing providers of tests and assessment tools with psychometric properties and/or services related to assessment, selection, screening, certification, licensing, educational or clinical uses. ATP members are committed to promote and advance the integrity of assessment services and products and their value to society; and dedicated to the highest level of professionalism and business ethics within the test publishing community.

What is the ATP Education Division?

The Education Division of the Association of Test Publishers is comprised of forward thinking companies engaged in the educational testing industry and pledged to promote and advance the role of assessment as an integral part of the educational process.

What is our mission?

- To monitor federal and state legislative and department initiatives and regulations and to influence them in order to assure a fair and beneficial business environment and reasonable opportunities for commercial publishers.
- To promote good testing practices and high technical standards.
- To protect the industry from undue regulation, prohibition and unauthorized publication and distribution of its products.
- To promote and preserve positive public perceptions about testing and assessment and advance the image of testing as beneficial to the educational process.
